The Olympics Are Yet Another Victim of America's Broken Immigration System

Released on Fri, Oct 02, 2009

Newspapers are reporting today that during the official Q&A session following the Chicago bid for the Olympic Games, I.O.C. member, Syed Shahid Ali, from Pakistan, asked President Obama how smooth it would be for foreigners to enter the United States for the Olympic Games because doing so can sometimes be "a rather harrowing experience." While this I.O.C. member's concerns raise a red flag about the need for a change in our immigration policies, a litany of voices have been warning for years that the U.S. is slowly adopting an anti-visitor policy that is harming business, higher education and families.

View Release [1]

Source URL:
http://immigrationpolicy.org/newsroom/release/olympics-are-yet-another-victim-americas-broken-immigration-system

Links:
[1] http://immigrationpolicy.org/sites/default/files/docs/Olympics_-_Another_Victim_of_Americas_Broken_Immigration_System_2009.pdf