

Q&A GUIDE TO ARIZONA'S IMMIGRATION LAW

WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW ABOUT THE LAW AND
HOW IT CAN IMPACT YOUR STATE

APRIL 2011

Q&A GUIDE TO ARIZONA'S IMMIGRATION LAW

WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW ABOUT THE LAW AND
HOW IT CAN IMPACT YOUR STATE

APRIL 2011

ABOUT THE IMMIGRATION POLICY CENTER

The Immigration Policy Center, established in 2003, is the policy arm of the American Immigration Council. IPC's mission is to shape a rational conversation on immigration and immigrant integration. Through its research and analysis, IPC provides policymakers, the media, and the general public with accurate information about the role of immigrants and immigration policy in U.S. society. IPC reports and materials are widely disseminated and relied upon by press and policymakers. IPC staff regularly serves as experts to leaders on Capitol Hill, opinion-makers, and the media. IPC is a non-partisan organization that neither supports nor opposes any political party or candidate for office. Visit our website at www.immigrationpolicy.org and our blog at www.immigrationimpact.com.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

WHY DO I NEED THIS GUIDE?	3
WHAT IS SB1070?	3
DEBUNKING THE MYTHS BEHIND SB1070	5
Q: Arizona supporters of the law say it just mirrors federal law—what’s wrong with states copying federal law?.....	5
Q: But if you don’t have papers, you are probably here illegally and the federal government is going to want to deport you anyway, so what’s the harm?.....	6
SB1070 and CRIME	7
Q: Didn’t the state legislature need to do something about the crime caused by illegal immigration in Arizona?	7
Q: Don’t illegal immigrants cause crime?	7
Q: But surely there is a rise in border crime related to illegal immigration?.....	7
Q: What about the kidnappings in Phoenix that have received so much media attention?	8
SB1070 AND COMMUNITY SAFETY	9
Q: Won’t strong state immigration enforcement make Arizona’s communities safer?.....	9
Q: Was this law needed to give police the authority to arrest immigrants?	9
Q: Will SB1070 help police catch serious criminals?.....	10
Q: Do law-enforcement officials support this law?.....	10
Q: What impact could SB1070-like legislation have on federal immigration enforcement resources?	11
THE FINANCIAL COST OF SB1070	12
Q: What will it cost to implement SB1070 in Arizona?	12
Q: What other costs will the state incur?	12
Q: How much will the litigation cost?	13
COPYCAT LEGISLATION	14
Q: Isn’t it time for states to take matters into their own hands?	14
Q: But the federal government hasn’t done anything, has it?	14
Q: What is the solution?.....	15

WHY DO I NEED THIS GUIDE?

One year after the passage of Arizona’s tough new immigration law (SB1070), both opponents and proponents are attempting to assess the impact the new law may have on residents of Arizona—citizens and immigrants alike. A federal district court ruling preliminarily enjoined large parts of the controversial law, meaning that those portions of the new law cannot be implemented, and the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the preliminary injunction. Other lawsuits have been filed challenging the constitutionality of the law and have yet to be ruled on, opponents have mounted boycotts, and numerous polls show that a majority of the public both supports the Arizona law and comprehensive immigration reform. Furthermore, despite criticism of SB1070 from Republicans, Democrats, police officials, religious leaders, and civil-rights leaders, legislators in many states have introduced or are considering introducing similar legislation.¹

SB1070 represents, among other things, a growing frustration with our broken immigration system. Ultimately, the courts will decide the constitutionality of the law, while time will answer many questions about its impact. In the short term, as other states contemplate copying Arizona’s version of immigration reform, there is plenty of evidence to suggest that an enforcement-only strategy—whether attempted at the federal or state level—does not solve the immigration problem.

This guide provides key answers to basic questions about Arizona’s law and the judge’s decision to stop parts of the law from being implemented—from the substance of the law and myths surrounding it to the legal and fiscal implications. As other states contemplate similar legislation, knowing the answers to basic questions about Arizona’s law will prove to be critically important in furthering the discussion.

WHAT IS SB1070?

SB1070, also known as the Support Our Law Enforcement and Safe Neighborhoods Act, was signed into law by Arizona governor Jan Brewer on April 23, 2010, and went into effect on July 29, 2010. As enacted, the legislation declares that “the intent of this act is to make attrition through enforcement the public policy of all state and local government agencies in Arizona.” In other words, the provisions of the bill are designed to eliminate illegal immigration in the state through the use of state and local law-enforcement actions. “Attrition through enforcement” has been promoted by groups like the Center for Immigration Studies and the Immigration Reform Law Institute (credited with drafting the bill) as a way to oppose comprehensive immigration reform. These groups are central to similar state and local anti-immigration efforts around the country.

A week after Gov. Brewer signed the law, the state legislature amended it to address some of the most egregious concerns, such as changing the requirement that police must determine immigration status during any “lawful contact” (for instance, saying hello to a bunch of kids in front of an ice cream stand, giving directions, helping a lost child) to any “lawful stop, detention, or arrest” (for instance, a traffic stop). While this limits the reach of the law somewhat, the legislature also made it clear that police must make immigration inquiries in response to any “law or ordinance of a county, city, or town”—which means that noise complaints, leaving a disabled car on the street, or failing to recycle could lead to questions about immigration status. According to correspondence between the law’s sponsor (Arizona State Senator Russell Pearce) and Kris Kobach (of the Immigration Reform Law Institute), these two changes made together ensure that virtually any contact could still allow police to “[initiate \[immigration\] queries as well.](#)”²

Q: What is the current status of the law?

A: On July 28, 2010, the day before SB1070 was scheduled to go into effect, a federal district court enjoined several of the most controversial parts of the law, issuing a preliminary injunction. On April 11, 2011, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit upheld the preliminary injunction, stopping the enforcement of the following four provisions of SB1070:

- Explicitly requiring state and local law-enforcement officials to inquire about immigration status during any lawful stop, detention, or arrest.
- Making it a misdemeanor to fail to carry proper immigration documents with a maximum fine of $100 and up to 20 days in jail for the first violation and up to 30 days in jail for a subsequent violation.
- Making it illegal for unauthorized immigrants to solicit work in any public space.
- Authorizing local police to make an arrest without a warrant of any person they believe is “removable from the United States.”

Q: What provisions of SB1070 remain in effect after the district court’s preliminary injunction?

A: SB1070 still:

- Makes it a misdemeanor to attempt to hire day laborers if the driver is impeding the normal flow of traffic.
- Makes it illegal for a worker to get into a car if it is impeding traffic.
- Makes it unlawful for any person to transport, move, conceal, harbor, or shield from detection any unauthorized immigrant if the person knows or recklessly disregards the fact that the immigrant is in the U.S. illegally.

- Mandates the impoundment of any vehicle used to transport, move, conceal, harbor, or shield an unauthorized immigrant.
- Allows officers to detain a person to make inquiries into immigration status if the person cannot produce valid documents.
- Mandates that an officer may not release someone from custody until immigration status has been verified.
- Prohibits cities, towns, and counties from having any policy in place that limits the investigation of violations of federal immigration laws. Many localities have “community policing policies” that enhance trust and cooperation between police and immigrant communities by not asking people who have not been arrested, including victims and witnesses to crimes, for their documents.
- Allows private citizens to sue state law-enforcement agencies if the private citizens believe law enforcement is not enforcing federal immigration laws to their liking.

Q: What are the next steps?

A: Backers of SB1070 have already vowed to take the case to the Supreme Court. However, because one judge dissented from the Ninth Circuit’s ruling, Arizona almost certainly will ask for the case to first be reargued before a larger panel of Ninth Circuit judges. If that request fails, and if the Supreme Court declines to step in, the case will be returned to the trial judge in Phoenix to determine whether the temporary injunction should become permanent.

DEBUNKING THE MYTHS BEHIND SB1070

Q: Arizona supporters of the law say it just mirrors federal law—what’s wrong with states copying federal law?

A: The Arizona law goes well beyond federal law, copying the words of certain immigration statutes, but imposing new and often more severe penalties than the federal law. This creates difficult and complex jurisdictional issues, as the federal government has been given the exclusive power to regulate immigration law, especially civil immigration law. Thus, even if Arizona law enforcement arrests every unauthorized person in the state, it is still up to the federal government to ultimately charge them, put them in immigration proceedings, and if necessary, deport them. In other words, Arizona’s state crimes only mirror federal law in their language, not in their effect. Even federal-state partnerships, such as 287(g) agreements, only give trained law-enforcement officers the authority to assist in enforcing federal civil immigration law—carrying out the consequences (penalties, relief, removal) remains a federal responsibility. Thus, the Arizona law heaps new punishments on people without actually solving the underlying immigration issue; what one immigration law expert has called using an “iron fist” toward immigrants in order to force the federal government to deport people.³

In the order enjoining various provisions of SB1070, the federal district court stated that “Congress has created and refined a complex and detailed statutory framework regulating immigration.”⁴ Instead of simply mirroring federal law, the judge found that SB1070 “will divert resources from the federal government’s other responsibilities and priorities.”⁵

The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals agreed, stating that “Congress has created a comprehensive and carefully calibrated scheme—and has authorized the Executive to promulgate extensive regulations—for adjudicating and enforcing civil removability.” The court elaborated, saying that “we are simply not persuaded that Arizona has the authority to unilaterally transform state and local law enforcement officers into a state-controlled DHS force to carry out its declared policy of attrition.”⁶

Q: But if you don’t have papers, you are probably here illegally and the federal government is going to want to deport you anyway, so what’s the harm?

A: Proponents argue that racial profiling is banned and therefore it’s not going to happen, but the law opens the door to intrusive questioning for anyone when there is a suspicion that the individual may be here illegally. While most U.S. citizens do not carry their passports, lack of such documentation could subject people to lengthy questioning, and possibly arrest or detention, if they cannot persuade an officer that they are in the U.S. legally. In particular, critics fear that persons who are Hispanic or dark-skinned, who have accents, or otherwise appear “different” are more likely to face racial profiling given the demographics of unauthorized immigration.

Determining whether or not someone is in the country unlawfully is not as simple as checking a database. Under the civil immigration system, most people are entitled to appear before an immigration judge before they are officially determined to be here illegally and in the process they have the right to challenge that determination, apply for relief from removal (such as asylum), and have their day in court. The Arizona law circumvents that process, potentially punishing people for being here illegally based solely on the determination of a state law-enforcement officer or a federal agency before a full determination has been made.

The federal district court agreed, finding that SB1070 “imposes an unacceptable burden on lawfully-present aliens”:

Legal residents will certainly be swept up by [the provision requiring that you carry your papers], particularly when the impacts of the provisions pressuring law enforcement agencies to enforce immigration laws are considered. Certain categories of people with transitional status and foreign visitors from countries that are part of the Visa Waiver Program will not have readily available documentation of their authorization to remain in the United States, thus potentially subjecting them to arrest or detention.⁷

SB1070 and CRIME

Q: Didn't the state legislature need to do something about the crime caused by illegal immigration in Arizona?

A: Despite the claims that SB1070 was needed to fight crime in the state, Arizona's crime rate has been falling for years.

According to data from the U.S. Bureau of Justice Statistics, the rates for both property crime and violent crime (including murder, assault, and rape) have been falling in Arizona in recent years.⁸

- The violent crime rate fell from 512 per 100,000 people in 2005 to 408 per 100,000 people in 2009.
- The property crime rate fell from 4,827 per 100,000 people in 2005 to 3,557 per 100,000 people in 2009.
- Rates for murder, aggravated assault, and rape in particular have clearly fallen in recent years.

Q: Don't illegal immigrants cause crime?

A: Unauthorized immigration is not associated with higher crime rates.

- Although the unauthorized immigrant population roughly tripled in size to more than 11 million from 1990 to 2008, data from the Bureau of Justice Statistics indicates that the violent crime rate in the United States declined by 37.7 percent during this time and the property crime rate fell by 36.7 percent.⁹
- The decline in crime rates was not just national, but also occurred in border cities and other cities with large immigrant populations such as San Diego, El Paso, Los Angeles, New York, Chicago, and Miami.¹⁰

Q: But surely there is a rise in border crime related to illegal immigration?

A: Border cities are not necessarily prone to higher crime due simply to their location. As a story in Reason Magazine describes, El Paso, Texas—which is a relatively poor and heavily Latino city that is home to many unauthorized immigrants—is among the safest big cities in the United States, even though it is next door to the violence-ridden Mexican city of Ciudad Juarez.¹¹

Q: What about the kidnappings in Phoenix that have received so much media attention?

A: The hysteria and false claims over kidnappings in Phoenix ignore two inconvenient facts. First of all, the victims of most kidnappings in Phoenix are unauthorized immigrants. Second, crime rates in Arizona have been falling for years. Cracking down on the unauthorized immigrants upon whom so many kidnappers prey is a classic case of blaming the victim. Moreover, this blame-the-victim posture diverts attention from the fact that the broken U.S. immigration system has created a lucrative market for kidnappers.

- Despite sensational claims by some politicians and commentators that Phoenix is the number two kidnapping capital of the world after Mexico City, PolitiFact Texas found that the global data upon which such a comparison might be made simply does not exist. The definition of “kidnapping” varies from place to place, and many kidnappings go unreported to local law-enforcement authorities. Moreover, the experts whom PolitiFact consulted speculated that, if there were such data, other cities in Latin America, Africa, and Asia “would prove to have more kidnappings than Arizona’s capital.”¹²
- In explaining the kidnappings that do occur in the Phoenix area, police Sgt. Tommy Thompson told The Arizona Republic in July 2009: “We’re talking about drop houses where people who have used coyotes to get into the country may be held for ransom. And we’re talking about the kidnapping of smugglers and associates. I have no fear that my kids or grandkids will be victims.”¹³
- A book by journalist Terry Greene Sterling, entitled Illegal: Life and Death in Arizona’s Immigration War Zone, explores the reality of kidnappings in Arizona by recounting the terrifying experience of two unauthorized immigrants from Mexico who were kidnapped for ransom by the smugglers (coyotes) they hired to bring them to the United States. After a five-day journey by foot through the desert along with several other immigrants, they were taken at gunpoint to a filthy “drop house” in a Phoenix suburb, told that the fee for smuggling them had nearly doubled, and threatened with death if they couldn’t produce the extra money.
- Data from the U.S. Bureau of Justice Statistics indicate that rates for both property crime and violent crime (including murder, assault, and rape) have fallen in Arizona in recent years,¹⁴ including in the state’s three largest cities: Phoenix, Tucson, and Mesa.¹⁵ Furthermore, an investigation by The Arizona Republic found that crime rates in Arizona border towns have remained flat for the past decade despite the surge in unauthorized immigration.¹⁶

SB1070 AND COMMUNITY SAFETY

Q: Won't strong state immigration enforcement make Arizona's communities safer?

A: Judging from the example of Maricopa County under Sheriff Joe Arpaio, SB1070 is likely to divert law-enforcement resources away from important crime-fighting tasks, and crime might actually increase. It may also erode the trust between the police and the communities they serve, meaning that victims and witnesses to crimes may not come forward and report crimes. This makes everyone in the community less safe.

- The East Valley Tribune found that, as Sheriff Arpaio has diverted his department's resources to immigration enforcement, response times to 911 calls have increased, arrest rates have dropped, and thousands of felony warrants have not been served.¹⁷

Q: Was this law needed to give police the authority to arrest immigrants?

A: No. The police have always had the authority to arrest immigrants for crimes they commit. If a police officer sees an immigrant commit a crime (such as theft or murder) or suspects that an immigrant has committed a crime, that police officer can arrest that immigrant for that crime. When expressly permitted by federal statute, local police may, under specified circumstances, arrest noncitizens for criminal violations of the immigration laws, such as reentering the United States after previously being deported. Furthermore, the police have always had the ability to contact ICE and inquire about an arrestee's immigration status, and many prisons and jails have an ICE presence, so that immigrants can be identified and placed into removal proceedings.

However, state and local police have been limited in their authority to enforce civil violations of immigration law, such as working without authorization or failing to carry documents. There are special programs that police can already use to get additional authority; for example police may enter into 287(g) agreements with ICE, which gives them the authority to enforce civil violations of immigration laws. Several police agencies in Arizona have these agreements already.

SB1070 takes federal, civil violations of immigration law and creates new state crimes, allowing state and local police to make criminal arrests for violations of civil immigration law. Whether or not Arizona can do this is a constitutional issue that will be addressed by the courts.

Q: Will SB1070 help police catch serious criminals?

A: Probably not. In fact, if police spend their time detaining and questioning people they suspect of being unauthorized immigrants, it will detract from their ability to investigate and solve more serious crimes. In Maricopa County, Sheriff Arpaio has focused on immigration violations and, as a result, has arrested few major criminals:

- Despite the time and energy spent on immigration enforcement, the East Valley Tribune found that Sheriff Arpaio has had little success in building cases against violent immigrant offenders or those at the top of smuggling rings.¹⁸
- In 2006-2007, Maricopa County sheriff's deputies arrested 578 illegal immigrants in the course of traffic stops, and—of those—498 faced a single charge of conspiracy to smuggle themselves.¹⁹

Q: Do law-enforcement officials support this law?

A: According to police officials, laws like Arizona's will make it more difficult for police officers to do their jobs.

Many top law-enforcement officials have opposed the law, including the Arizona Association of Chiefs of Police. They say that the law will harm their ability to protect the community and alienate police officers from the communities they serve. The law will also force police officers to devote scarce resources to investigating immigrants' status rather than solving serious crimes.

- Arizona Association of Chiefs of Police (AACOP)
“The provisions of the bill remain problematic and will negatively affect the ability of law enforcement agencies across the state to fulfill their many responsibilities in a timely manner. While AACOP recognizes immigration as a significant issue in Arizona, we remain strong in our belief that it is an issue most appropriately addressed at the federal level.”²⁰
- Sheriff Clarence Dupnik, Pima County, AZ
“...in the past few weeks Arizona became a model for the rest of the country of what not to do. I have an enormous amount of respect for the men and women of my department... But no one can tell them what an illegal immigrant looks like and when it is ok to begin questioning a person along those lines. This law puts them in a no-win situation: They will be forced to offend and anger someone who is perhaps a citizen or here legally when they ask to see his papers—or be accused of nonfeasance because they do not. Law enforcement did not ask for and does not need this new tool. What we do need is assistance from the federal government in the form of effective strategies to secure the border. Additionally, the federal government must take up this issue in the form of comprehensive immigration reform policy.”²¹

➤ Chief Robert Davis, San Jose, CA, president of the Major Cities Chiefs Association

“[Regarding the Arizona legislation, the Major Cities Chiefs Association stands by its policy that] immigration enforcement by local police would likely negatively effect and undermine the level of trust and cooperation between local police and immigrant communities.”²²

➤ Sergeant Brian Soller, Mesa, AZ; President, Mesa Lodge, Fraternal Order of Police

“If we’re getting hammered with calls, is a misdemeanor [trespassing by an illegal immigrant] more important than a stabbing or shooting? No. The problem with this law is that it’s an unfunded mandate and could eat up a lot of manpower and cost a lot of money.”²³

Q: What impact could SB1070-like legislation have on federal immigration enforcement resources?

A: These laws could jeopardize the federal government’s ability to set priorities for federal immigration enforcement and could divert scarce federal resources away from finding dangerous criminals throughout the United States, focusing instead on detaining and deporting non-violent immigrants from those states that pass legislation.

SB1070-like laws put a tremendous strain on ICE’s resources and reduce their effectiveness in enforcing immigration laws. One result of such laws is to inundate DHS with requests to determine the immigration status of individuals police have arrested for suspicion of being unlawfully present. If ICE determines that the individual is indeed unlawfully present, ICE would be expected to take custody of him/her and place him/her in deportation proceedings. In other words, individual states would supply ICE with a huge number of people to deal with—most of them charged with or convicted of very minor offenses. While proponents of the law would say that this is the very purpose of the law, it actually strains ICE’s resources and harms their ability to target noncitizens who pose a terrorist threat or a threat to the community.

THE FINANCIAL COST OF SB1070

Q: What will it cost to implement SB1070 in Arizona?

A: Implementation of SB1070 will be very expensive at a time when the state is already struggling financially.

- The Arizona legislature failed to produce a fiscal analysis on how much SB1070 will cost the state before passage of the bill. However, a fact sheet produced by Yuma County Sheriff Ralph E. Ogden in response to similar legislation proposed in 2006 provides some quantifiable data.²⁴ Yuma County is one of Arizona's 15 counties, with a population of about 200,000. The 2006 fact sheet estimates the costs of a similar bill which would have authorized the police to arrest illegal immigrants on trespassing charges if they were simply present in the state. It shows a staggering potential cost to Yuma County law-enforcement agencies from the moment of arrest to the point of conviction, sentencing, and incarceration.²⁵
- The Sheriff estimated that:
 - Law-enforcement agencies would spend between $775,880 and $1,163,820 in processing expenses;
 - Jail costs would be between $21,195,600 and $96,086,720;
 - Attorney and staff fees would be $810,067-$1,620,134;
 - Additional detention facilities would have to be built at unknown costs.
 - In addition, the Superior Court, Justice Courts, Juvenile Courts, and Municipal Courts would realize increased costs for additional court staff, interpreters, administrative staff, and pre-trial services.²⁶
 - Multiplying this among all 15 counties means the costs of implementing SB1070 could rise into the 100s of millions of dollars for the state.

Q: What other costs will the state incur?

A: States could experience a major blow to tourism and conventions. After Arizona passed SB1070, major groups and associations cancelled events and conventions in the state. A report by the Center for American Progress (CAP) estimates that Arizona will lose $45 million in lodging revenue alone. When losses to food and beverage, entertainment, in-town transportation, and retail sales are included, the estimated combined loss of conference attendee spending rises to $141 million.²⁷ Arizona was eventually forced to spend $250,000 for a marketing campaign to help improve its image after SB1070 was enacted.²⁸

Many states that considered SB1070-type laws in early 2010 backed off once they received cost estimates for such legislation.²⁹ In Indiana, state police said they would have to spend $5 million to train for and enforce the law.³⁰ Similar estimates were given in Tennessee, where the General Assembly Fiscal Review Committee found that it would increase expenditures by $3 million for the first year and $1.8 million every year after that.³¹ Perhaps most telling was Kentucky, where a copycat bill died after an estimate showed it would cost the state $89 million per year to enforce.³²

- A 2011 report by Dr. Raul Hinojosa-Ojeda and Marshall Fitz found that deporting all of the unauthorized immigrants in Arizona would decrease total employment by 17.2 percent, eliminate 581,000 jobs for immigrants and native-born workers alike, shrink the state economy by $48.8 billion, and reduce state tax revenues by 10.1 percent.³³
- The Mayor of Phoenix estimated that the loss of convention revenue to the state as a result of SB1070 will be at least $90 million over 5 years due to boycotts.³⁴
- A report by veteran journalist Jeffrey Kaye found a state of confusion among law enforcement as to how SB1070 would be implemented. Kaye detailed divisions among law-enforcement officials—both in how to train law-enforcement officers, how to enforce and implement the law, and conflicts as to whether the law is an efficient way to protect Arizona.
- A study released in July 2007 by the University of Arizona’s Udall Center for Studies in Public Policy concluded that economic output would drop annually by at least $29 billion, or 8.2 percent, if all non-citizens, which include unauthorized workers, were removed from Arizona’s workforce. About 14 percent of the state’s 2.6 million workers are foreign-born, and about two-thirds to three-fourths of non-citizens are unauthorized.³⁵
- The Perryman Group estimated that if all unauthorized immigrants were removed from Arizona, the state would lose $26.4 billion in economic activity, $11.7 billion in gross state product, and approximately 140,324 jobs.³⁶

Q: How much will the litigation cost?

- So far seven lawsuits have been filed to stop implementation of SB1070 and the true extent of the costs has yet to be seen. At the end of February, 2011, Arizona had already spent more than $1.5 million defending SB1070.³⁷ Other states and localities that passed anti-immigrant legislation and ordinances have been caught up in costly litigation to defend their laws. For example:
 - Fremont, Nebraska recently passed a ban on hiring or renting property to unauthorized immigrants, yet is having trouble implementing the law because of litigation costs. Officials estimate that defending the law will cost the state an average of $1 million per year in legal fees, and as a result, Fremont taxpayers are now facing a potential 18 percent increase in property taxes.³⁸

- Farmers Branch, Texas has already spent about $3.2 million to defend itself since September 2006, when it launched the first of three ordinances. The city has budgeted $623,000 for legal expenses through the rest of the fiscal year related to the ordinance defense. Legal costs could exceed $5 million by the end of the fiscal year.³⁹
- Hazleton, Pennsylvania's insurance carrier is asking a federal judge to rule that it is not responsible for nearly $2.4 million in attorney fees being sought by the plaintiffs who successfully challenged the city's Illegal Immigration Relief Act.⁴⁰
- Riverside, New Jersey rescinded an ordinance that penalized renting to or employing unauthorized immigrants after the town of 8,000 accumulated $82,000 in legal fees.⁴¹

COPYCAT LEGISLATION

Q: Isn't it time for states to take matters into their own hands?

A: No. While people are genuinely frustrated over the failure of the federal government to fix our broken immigration system, creating a patchwork of potentially unconstitutional and confusing laws is not an answer. A poll conducted by Politico shows that people don't necessarily want states to jump into the fray as much as they want solutions. While 23% of respondents supported states taking action, 61% supported passing comprehensive immigration reform through Congress.⁴² A CNN poll showed that while 55% of Americans favor SB1070, an astounding 81% supported a plan that would legalize unauthorized immigrants if they had a job and paid back taxes.⁴³

Q: But the federal government hasn't done anything, has it?

A: For more than two decades, the U.S. government has tried without success to stamp out unauthorized immigration through enforcement efforts at the border and in the interior of the country without fundamentally reforming the broken immigration system that spurs unauthorized immigration in the first place. Ironically, while billions upon billions of dollars have been poured into enforcement, the number of unauthorized immigrants in the United States has increased dramatically.

- On August 13, 2010, President Obama signed into law a $600 million bill focused on border security. The bill provides $175.9 million for additional Border Patrol agents, $50 million for additional ICE agents, $14 million for additional border fencing, $32 million for unmanned aerial vehicles on the border, and $30 million for law-enforcement activities targeted at reducing violence along the southwest border.⁴⁴

- The annual budget of the U.S. Border Patrol stood at $3.0 billion in Fiscal Year (FY) 2009—a nine-fold increase since FY 1992. The number of Border Patrol agents stationed along the southwest border with Mexico grew to 16,974 in FY 2009—a nearly five-fold increase since FY 1992.
- Yet the unauthorized-immigrant population of the United States has tripled in size, from roughly 3.5 million in 1990 to 11.9 million in 2008.

Q: What is the solution?

A: If we want to avoid creating a patchwork of potentially unconstitutional laws that attempt to regulate national immigration policy state-by-state, then we must fix our broken immigration system. Arizona is not alone in its frustration, but the focus on border security fails to tell the real story of our immigration crisis. The problems are complex but there are real solutions. The enforcement-only approach to our immigration problems is clearly not yielding the results needed. It is time for Congress and the President to propose comprehensive solutions that recognize the complexity and balance needed for an orderly and fair immigration system. A comprehensive approach to immigration reform recognizes that illegal immigration will never be stopped solely by building fences and putting the National Guard on the border. It requires addressing the reasons people come to the U.S.—to work, to be with family, to build a new life—by ensuring that we have a legal immigration system that meets the demands of our economy and our families, that requires people who are here illegally to register, pay taxes, learn English, and commit to the system, and that uses smart workplace, border, and interior enforcement strategies to enforce our laws.

Endnotes

¹ Reform Immigration for America, “State and Local Elected Leaders for Immigration Reform,” June 2, 2010.

² Andrea Nill, “EXCLUSIVE: Email From Author Of Arizona Law Reveals Intent To Cast Wide Net Against Latinos,” The Work Room {Blog}, April 30, 2010.

³ Kevin Johnson, “Viewpoints: Arizona law will likely collide with Constitution – and lose,” The Sacramento Bee, May 2, 2010.

⁴ United States v. State of Arizona, No. 10-01413 at 5 (D. Ariz. prelim. Injunction granted July 28, 2010).

⁵ United States v. State of Arizona, No. 10-01413 at 17 (D. Ariz. prelim. Injunction granted July 28, 2010).

⁶ United States v. State of Arizona, No. 10-16645 at 4848 (Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, April 11, 2011).

⁷ United States v. State of Arizona, No. 10-01413 at 19-20 (D. Ariz. prelim. Injunction granted July 28, 2010).

⁸ U.S. Bureau of Justice Statistics, Data Online: Crime Trends.

⁹ Ibid.

¹⁰ Ramiro Martínez, Jr., Matthew T. Lee and A. L. Nielsen, “Segmented Assimilation, Local Context and Determinants of Drug Violence in Miami and San Diego: Does Ethnicity and Immigration Matter?,” International Migration Review 38(1), March 2004: 131-157; Matthew T. Lee, Ramiro Martínez, Jr. and Richard B. Rosenfeld, “Does Immigration Increase Homicide? Negative Evidence from Three Border Cities,” Sociological Quarterly 42(4), September 2001: 559–580.

¹¹ Radley Balko, “The El Paso Miracle,” Reason Magazine, July 6, 2009.

¹² PolitiFact Texas, “McCain says Phoenix is the second kidnapping capital in the world,” June 28, 2010.

¹³ E.J. Montini, “Is Phoenix really the ‘kidnapping capital’?” The Arizona Republic, July 12, 2009.

¹⁴ Walter Ewing, Arizona’s Punishment Doesn’t Fit the Crime (Washington, DC: Immigration Policy Center, American Immigration Council, June 22, 2010).

¹⁵ Walter Ewing, New FBI Data Confirms Falling Crime Rates in Arizona (Washington, DC: Immigration Policy Center, American Immigration Council, June 17, 2010).

¹⁶ Dennis Wagner, “Violence is not up on Arizona border despite Mexican drug war,” The Arizona Republic, May 2, 2010.

¹⁷ East Valley Tribune, “Reasonable Doubt: A look into Arpaio’s immigration campaign,” July 9-13, 2008.

-
- ¹⁸ Ibid.
- ¹⁹ Ibid.
- ²⁰ Arizona Association of Chiefs of Police, "AACOP Statement on Senate Bill 1070," Law Enforcement Engagement Initiative, April 21, 2010.
- ²¹ Sheriff Clarence Dupnik, "Arizona's Immigration Mistake," Wall Street Journal, May 5, 2010.
- ²² Kevin Johnson, "Arizona immigration law creates rift," USA Today, April 24, 2010.
- ²³ Mike Sakal, "Police unions: Immigration bill taxes officers," East Valley Tribune, April 18, 2010.
- ²⁴ Sheriff Ralph E. Ogden, Fact Sheet (Yuma, AZ: Yuma County Sheriff's Office, May 3, 2006).
- ²⁵ See Randal Archibold, "Arizona Governor Vetoes Illegal Immigration Bill," New York Times, June 7, 2006.
- ²⁶ Sheriff Ralph E. Ogden, Fact Sheet (Yuma, AZ: Yuma County Sheriff's Office, May 3, 2006).
- ²⁷ Marshall Fitz and Angela Kelley, Stop the Conference: The Economic and Fiscal Consequences of Conference Cancellations Due to Arizona's SB1070 (Washington, DC: Center for American Progress, November 2010).
- ²⁸ Ginger Rough and Dawn Gilbertson, "Governor Out to Rebrand Arizona Over Immigration Law Criticism," The Arizona Republic, May 14, 2010.
- ²⁹ A. Elena Lacayo, One Year Later-A Look at SB 1070 and Copycat Legislation (Washington, DC: National Council of la Raza, April 2011), p. 5.
- ³⁰ Heather Gillers, "Kenley: Revamp Immigration Proposal," Indianapolis Star, March 15, 2011.
- ³¹ James W. White, Fiscal Note SB 780 - HB 1380 (Nashville, TN: Tennessee General Assembly Fiscal Review Committee, March 14, 2011).
- ³² NECN, "Cost of Ky. Immigration Bill Could Reach \$89M," February 2, 2011.
- ³³ Raul Hinojosa-Ojeda and Marshall Fitz, A Rising Tide or a Shrinking Pie: The Economic Impact of Legalization Versus Deportation in Arizona (Washington, DC: Immigration Policy Center and Center for American Progress, March 2011).
- ³⁴ Randal C. Archibold, "Phoenix Counts Big Boycott Cost," New York Times, May 11, 2010.
- ³⁵ Ryan Randazzo, "Undocumented workers add 8.2%, or \$29 billion, to Arizona output," The Arizona Republic, July 11, 2007.
- ³⁶ The Perryman Group, An Essential Resource: An Analysis of the Economic Impact of Undocumented Workers on Business Activity in the US with Estimated Effects by State and by Industry (Waco, TX: April 2008).
- ³⁷ Ginger Rough, "1.5 Million Already Spent Defending SB 1070," The Arizona Republic, February 25, 2011.
- ³⁸ Andrea Nill, "Small Nebraska Town May Raise Taxes To Defend Immigration Law," The Wonk Room {blog}, August 23, 2010.
- ³⁹ Dianne Solis, "Farmers Branch legal costs rise in immigration fight," The Dallas Morning News, April 9, 2010.
- ⁴⁰ Terrie Morgan-Besecker, "Hazleton insurer says it's not liable for legal fees," Times Leader, September 19, 2007.
- ⁴¹ Ken Belson and Jill P. Capuzza, "Towns Rethink Laws Against Illegal Immigrants," New York Times, September 26, 2007.
- ⁴² Mark Penn, "Poll: Surprising demand for immigration reform," Politico, August 15, 2010.
- ⁴³ Poll conducted by the Opinion Research Corporation for CNN, July 27, 2010.
- ⁴⁴ Text of H.R. 6080: "Making emergency supplemental appropriations for border security for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2010, and for other purposes," August 12, 2010.