E-Verify and Arizona: A Rough Road Ahead for Employers, Employees, and the Economy

Immigration OnPoint: Facts at Your Fingertips for Frequently Asked Immigration Questions

On January 1, 2008 the Legal Arizona Workers Act went into effect, which requires all employers in the state to enroll in and use the E-Verify system to verify the employment eligibility of all new hires. While not yet fully implemented in Arizona, E-Verify is already showing significant signs of trouble – including its negative impact on Arizona workers and employers, as well as the state's economy. This week, *Immigration OnPoint* highlights Arizona's experience with E-Verify and suggests Congress should heed the warning signals as they contemplate a national EEVS.

- E-Verify and Arizona: Early Experiences for Employers, Employees, and the Economy Portend a Rough Road Ahead (Immigration Policy Center – May 2008) - This fact sheet covers the experiences of Arizona's employers and employees with E-Verify, and early signals of its impact on the state's economy

Immigration OnPoint is a project coordinated by the Immigration Policy Center to create and maintain an online catalogue of short documents and fact sheets that provide quick answers to commonly asked questions about immigrants and immigration. Immigration is a notoriously complex issue area, and the current immigration debate is filled with myths, misinformation, fear, and emotion, making reasoned decision-making difficult. OnPoint documents are meant to confront myths and provide factual information about immigrants and immigration policy.

Documents on the OnPoint website are meant to be widely distributed to the public, press, policymakers, and others in order to inject factual information into the immigration debate.

Many different organizations have contributed their time and expertise to create these documents. OnPoint will continue to grow and be updated throughout the year. OnPoint documents are organized by topic. Check back frequently to see if any new items have been added!
